Before the revolution

- Average Egyptians were dealing with lack of human rights, unemployment and high food prices.
- They did not believe they were being leased correctly by their president, Hosni Mubarak
- The government was not taking care of them; they were getting fed up.

During the revolution

- The revolution started on January 25th, 2011.
- Hundreds of thousands of protesters gathered in Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt.
- Demanded president Mubarak to out.
- Protests were organized by people involved in social media like Ahmed Maher or Wael Ghoneim who set up a Facebook page named Kolenakhaled Saeed.
- There was brutal police force that led to some deaths.
- President Mubarak stepped down after 18 days.

After the revolution

- After president Mubarak stepped down the military took power,
- lead to strict laws and regulations.
- a new president, Mohammad Morsi, was elected.
- New protests against Morsi arose, and violence became regular.

Animal farm

- The Egyptian protesters were the incentive for a new life
- Just like the animals in Animal Farm the Egyptians believed in something and took actions towards it
- They both weren't being treated fairly
- They both rebelled strongly and got the initial outcome they wanted
- In the long run life continued to be difficult for both

Key similarities between animal farm and the revolution

Animal farm

- Animals were being treated badly by their owner
- The animals took extreme measures to over rule Mr. Jones
- Pigs took power and obtained strict rules
- Napoleon had the dogs use violence and intimidation to control the animals

Egyptian Revolution

- Citizens were faced with poor conditions because of their leader
- Protesters gathered and demanded their president to step down
- Military took power which lead to strict laws and regulations
- Police used brutal force to contain protests
