

THE EGYPTIAN REVOLUTION

Keira Coulard-Smith

OPPRESSION

- The people of Egypt felt they had a lack of rights. They had been oppressed for many years, and had finally had enough. They were inspired by Tunisia's revolution.

REVOLUTION

- Using social media sites like twitter and Facebook, the people planned a revolution. Starting on January 25, 2011, the people crowded the Tahrir Square to overthrow long time president Hosni Mubarak.

VICTORY

- On February 11, 2011, Mubarak stepped down. The people had accomplished their goal. Field Marshal Abdel Fattah al-Sisi ran the government to keep things in order, until he stepped down to participate in the presidential election. As the only candidate, he won with nearly 93 percent of the votes.

ANIMAL FARM

- In Animal Farm, the pig, Napoleon, says that he would be the one to make life better for the animals. Once he is in charge, life goes back to the way it was when the farm was run by Mr. Jones.
- When Field Marshal Abdel Fattah al-Sisi was put into power, it was because the people believed he would be the one to help them gain their rights. As of yet, no change has occurred.
